

Arizona Day by Day

Live News Taken From Territorial Exchanges.

J. W. Ankuship went to Prescott Monday afternoon to meet his wife, who is coming from Phoenix. They will arrive Tuesday morning.—Jerome Herald.

At the border Arizona cattlemen are still troubled with Mexican thieves and stockmen propose to take better arrangements for the protection of their herds.

Saturday night the Prescott city police raided an opium den, captured about twenty-five cans of opium and several smoking outfits and arrested the proprietor of the place and two smokers.—Prescott Courier.

Word was received yesterday that G. R. Smith, well known in Tucson, died recently from smallpox in Mexico. Mr. Smith ran a job office in town for some time and was a candidate for justice of the peace at the election last November.—Tucson Star.

Regarding the number of cattle that have been shipped the past two months from different parts of Arizona it is said that in proportion to the number of range cattle more have been sent from the San Pedro than from any other valley in the territory.

The suicide theory in connection with the death of Claude Matthews is without foundation. Dr. Purcell held an autopsy to discover the cause of death and the result showed that death was not the result of suicide. Judge Culver will hold the inquest today.—Tucson Citizen.

Ex-Supervisor Richardson expressed about $100 worth of animal bounty seals to the board of supervisors from Crittenden for a friend, and the charges at this end were forty cents, but "it appeared" to the board that they had no cash and could not pay it. Richardson had to advance the forty cents before he could get that $100 worth of seals before they strangely moving county dads.—Arizona Frontier.

At the trial of Frank Scott Wednesday evening, after Judge Burkes admitted how easily he was bugged out of his money every eye in the house was cast upon him and every man wanted to make a date with him. We thought we would be the first to tap him but W. S. Adams who had heard the evidence, called "Honest John" outside and we knew we stood no show, for all newspaper men look alike to me.—Jerome Herald.

An old Indian and his two sons and daughters were in town Thursday peddling meat. The girl attracted many admirers around her by her handsome face and shly manner. The young men vying with each other in showing her favors. She took a decided fancy to Charley Shepherd and tried to induce him to return with her to her mountain home, but Shepherd refused but promised to send Dewees as soon as he can spare him for a few days.—Jerome Herald.

The Southern Pacific company has notified Tucson merchants that on and after May 6 the special freight rate to Nogales will be abolished and the regular tariff rate will prevail. This means that the freight charges between Tucson and Nogales will be about double. This is serious and unless our merchants can persuade the company to waive its termination of the trade to Nogales will be materially affected. Of course there is always the recourse to the wagon roads, but this is cumbersome and troublesome.—Arizona Frontier.

Mr. R. Richardson of Franklin, Pa., arrived in the city yesterday. He was met at Benson by Hon. R. R. Richardson, his son, the owner of the famous Pennsylvania ranch in the Sonoita valley. Mr. Richardson is one of the leading citizens of western Pennsylvania and although a genuine Pennsylvania republican his strong personal friendship for honest Joe Sibley has led him to always vote for Sibley when up for congress. Mr. Richardson will leave for the Pennsylvania ranch today with his son. His visit to Arizona will probably be extended two months. The Star wishes him a most enjoyable sojourn, for he has given to southern Arizona one of the most respected, substantial and worthy citizens.—Tucson Star.

Quite a large crowd assembled at the city park last evening to listen to the music and speeches in honor of Dewey's victory. Mariner's band dispensed patriotic music pending the arrival of the speakers. Hon. M. P. Freeman presided and opened the meeting with a few appropriate remarks. Judge Barnes followed and in well chosen words reviewed Dewey's victory, and then launched off into an expansion speech. The judge argued the question well from an expansion standpoint. Hon. Mark Smith and Judge Wright were billed to speak but did not show up. Mr. Smith on account of illness could not be present, and somebody said that Judge Wright had a frog in his throat. The meeting demonstrated that there was lots of Deweyism in the citizens of the old pueblo.—Tucson Star.

The foods we eat furnish energy for the body just as burning coal makes steam for an engine.

The experiments of Prof. Frankland, Ph. D., of London, shows that cod-liver oil yields two and one-half times more energy than starches or sweets.

Scott's Emulsion is pure cod-liver oil combined with hypophosphites of lime and soda. It forms fat, gives strength, enriches the blood, invigorates the nerves, and repairs tissues.

A TRYING MOMENT.

People are telling a most remarkable story about a famous, but somewhat eccentric woman, who is just now visiting the capital. She was invited to a luncheon a week or so ago and she accepted the invitation. Several women well worth knowing were asked to meet her. When they all came to the table the famous guest asked for a finger bowl. The maid, too well trained to show surprise at anything, brought a bowl half filled with water. The famous woman drew a small bottle from her pocket and emptied its contents into the water. Then calmly she proceeded to have her spoon and fork in the liquid, and wiped them on the damask napkin, explaining the while that for her health's sake she made it a rule never to touch her lips with silver that had not been properly sterilized. The bottle contained antiseptic of some kind—I've forgotten the name of it. The host part of the story, to my way of thinking, is what the hostess did. She did not look upon the proceeding as any reflection upon her housekeeping methods. She did not stare haughtily. She simply smiled into the agonized eyes of the woman who had brought the famous guest, and said: "What a very excellent idea."—Washington Post.

Description of the First Trip of a New Ice Boat.

Consul General Holloway of St. Petersburg sends to the state department, under date of March 28, translation of an interesting article from the Novoe Vremia of the 17th ultimo, referring to the first trip of the new 10,000-ton ice boat recently built in England for the purpose of keeping the ports of St. Petersburg and Riga open during the winter months, as follows:

"The ice boat Ermak arrived at Cronstadt March 5-17. This boat was made after plans prepared by Admiral Makarov and built in England. Owing to the fog, it had to remain two days in Bel. Near Revel it met with very thick ice, but still continued moving at seven knots per hour. Near Sesikari it met with large fields of ice, from nine to ten feet high above the water line. Here the Ermak could not move on; but, with the aid of its machinery, it acquired a swinging motion, and the water running out of a special apparatus in the boat melted the ice under the vessel, which moved on, dispersing the ice mountains. The ice boat presses on the ice, with its prop, the screw that is under it lets out water which softens the ice, and the movement of the screw makes the small pieces. The ice boat has no keel and should therefore be subject to great rolling, but, in order to avoid this, there is a receptacle in the hull of the vessel, filled with water, which is arranged in such a way that the water can be drawn out of the vessel to sway too much one side or the other, and keeps it in equilibrium.

"The boat was met at Cronstadt with great triumph and music. Hundreds of people went out to meet it, running alongside of it on the ice.

"The ice boat belongs as yet to the ministry of finance. It is at the same time a passenger boat, a freight boat and a tug boat. It can accommodate nineteen first-class passengers, for which it has a fine cabin, decorated with imperial portraits, with double windows, double illuminators and a special ventilator, which lets warm air into the cabin. The walls are of oak. The boat is lighted by electricity."

On March 31 the consul general adds:

"The new ice boat Ermak left Cronstadt on the 25th of March and opened the port of Revel, plowing a path from there to eighteen feet of ice, releasing three commercial steamers that were frozen fast some distance from the shore. On the morning of March 27 the Ermak left Revel, clearing the way to the sea for four vessels. During the first four days of the Ermak's arrival at Rostock she released sixteen vessels from the ice and opened the way for them to proceed to sea."

GOSSIP OF FOREIGN CAPITALS.

The recent dispatches cabled from Europe to the effect that the prince of Wales has become distinctly careless with regard to his appearance and manner, and could no longer be considered in the light of a leader of the fashion, serves to draw attention to the fact that save with a few exceptions, the princes of the blood in the old world are distinctly shabby in their attire.

Thus old Emperor William's shabbiness was the despair of his family and household, especially of his valet. The elbow of his uniform was in many cases glazed from use, and the seams whitened, while the cut and shape were appallingly behind the times. Emperor Frederick's son, manifested the same marked aversion to new garments, and was at his greatest ease when pottering around his garden, or at a picnic, or in a suit of "dittos," by no means new, and rather baggy at the knees, and a German pipe with porcelain bowl, such as the peasants use, dangling from his mouth.

King of Denmark, who shares with Queen Victoria the privilege of being able to address more than half the crowned heads of Europe as either child or grandchild, strolls about the streets of Copenhagen in a very shabby old gray jacket with a soft hat. On one memorable occasion, while staying at Hamburg for a couple of days, he was actually seen in the present prior out of the leading jewelry store of the city owing to his shabby appearance, the jeweler being convinced that a man so poorly dressed could be in the store for no honest purpose.

In Spain-in-law, the late Czar Alexander was never so happy as when arrayed in an old loose blouse of a peculiar Russian cut, fastened around the waist by a rusty old leather belt. At other times he would wear a stiff derby hat, and a very ill shaped jacket buttoned across his broad chest and ample stomach. His son, the present Emperor Nicholas, shares his taste for simplicity of attire, being habitually arrayed either in a suit of "dittos" of English make, like his cousin, the duke of York, or else in the very plain undress uniform of his favorite Prussian regiment, than which there is no plainer uniform in Europe.

The late King Victor Emmanuel of Italy was never so happy as when in his shirt sleeves, and he used frequently to take his seat at table with his monogamous wife, thus attired.—Marquise de Fontenay in Washington Post.

REFLECTIONS OF A BACHELOR.

(From the New York Press.)

The only good thing about a bear is the fact that the people who ride in it are supposed to be dead.

There are two kinds of people in the world—those who take in a great deal and those who take in a great many.

When a woman has a husband that nobody else on earth can get along with, she says he is "a diamond in the rough."

What a woman really thinks of her husband is generally about half as nice as what he thinks other people must think of him.

When people are arguing, half of them think the rest think they are always right, and half of them think the rest think they are never wrong.

The man who is always late has his shortcomings.

GRACE Did I tell you about Martin's wife? You know she has periodical attacks of something very like colic. I tried to have her take Ripans Tabules, but she never would. She writes me that owing to my recommendation she took up the Tabules after she went home, and has had no trouble since, though a great deal more time has passed than has been usual between the attacks.

ALICE Does she still live in Troy?

GRACE Oh, yes.

A new style packet containing THE RIPANS TABULES in a paper wrapper (without glass) is now for sale at every drug store—each five cents. This low priced packet is intended for the poor and is economical. The contents of the packet are the same as the regular one, but by mail we send the regular one to the EXPRESS COMPANY, No. 10 Spruce Street, New York—or a single carton (also available) will be sent for five cents.
